Raborn Denies CIA
Is 'Invisible Army'

United Press International

Adm. William F. Raborn pictured the Central Intelligence Agency yesterday as a "church-going member" of the governmental family and not a clandestine network of spies.

Raborn, who recently stepped down as CIA Director, denied that the CIA was an "invisible army" which spent its time stirring up insurrections in other countries.

In reality, he said on "Meet the Press (NBC-WRC), it was composed of highly educated persons dedicated to maintaining the security of the United States.
